Each year the Commission is charged with setting policy for Commission action and selecting priority issues for its public education and legislative programs. In its 40 year history, the Commission has examined and supported public policy development in many areas of concern to California women and their families—civil rights; sex equity in education; discrimination in employment, insurance, and credit; sexual harassment; domestic violence and sexual assault; access to health care; reproductive freedom; child and other dependent care; pay inequities and comparable worth; legal rights of women in marriage and divorce; social security and pensions. We continue to advocate for California women and girls on the path toward equality.
